Robert Tonner introduces new collector dolls in the likeness of Daniel Radcliffe as Harry Potter, along with Emma Watson as Hermione Granger and Rupert Grint as Ron Weasley from Warner Bros. Pictures' feature film Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire. At 17" tall, each doll features remarkably engineered jointing with 14 points of articulation, offering the collector unlimited posing and play possibilities. Crafted of hard plastic and high-quality vinyl, with hand-painted face detail, this is a doll to be played with and enjoyed.

Each generation of women seems to remember one particular doll as the must-have toy of their childhood. For little girls born in the mid-1930s to 1950s, Effanbee's Dy-Dee Baby® is such a doll. Dy-Dee® was sculpted by Bernard Lipfert in 1933 to realistically drink, wet, and blow bubbles — this was a doll that engaged a child's imagination and affection as no doll had before.*

Dy-Dee Baby® is an 11" vinyl and hard plastic doll with sleep eyes and painted, molded hair.

Toni® was an instant American Classic when she was first introduced to children in 1949. Toni® endured through the ages, reminiscent of childhood innocence; today, Robert Tonner reintroduces Toni® as a 14" hard plastic, fine doll with an endearing nod to the vintage days of yesteryear.

Little Orphan Annie®

"Dolls that Touch your Heart"®

Little Orphan Annie®, that loveable red-haired moppet, comes to life as a 14" doll based on the Bernard Lipfert sculpt "Patsy®." Our Annie® is absolutely perfect in her basic onesie slip or her classic red dress—either doll is ready to take on whatever life "dishes out"—with a smile!

Little Orphan Annie® is a 14" vinyl doll, fully strung, with a hand-detailed painted face, and red, rooted, curly, saran hair.

Patsy's little sister made her debut in 1935 under the name "Fairy Princess" (though her mold markings were, and remain, "Wee Patsy"). Now Robert Tonner has re-interpreted 5" Wee Patsy™ as a new, fully strung 5" vinyl doll with more posing possibilities. We think our new Wee Patsy™ will touch your heart!
